(c) it is one of the recognised objectives of Development Planning that employment opportunities should be created in increasing measure. It cannot, however be overlooked that a State of full employment would come about only when the economy picks up considerably and there is alround increase in production which in turn calls for massive investment both in the public and private sectors. With our existing limitations, there is difficulty in reaching, such a state. However, efforts are being usually made to sponsor schemes which have a better employment potential.
